HAMPER BAG

Hamper bags are bags with “flip tops” that close the bags. They are used in health care, where germs need to be contained as much as possible. Hamper bags were originally made of 100% cotton, then poly/cotton blends. However, now almost all hamper bags are made of 100% synthetic material, which does not absorb germs, odors or moisture.

Many hamper bags are made of fluid resistant barriers, or even 100% fluid retardant fabrics. They are often printed with biohazard logos.

BeShield

BeShield is a 100% filament polyester fabric that is fluid resistant. This light weight bag is ideal for moderately soiled linens when barrier protection is desired and abrasion is not an issue.

Note: BeShield fabric is not guaranteed to be leak proof. It is only resistant to fluid. Fabric will remain fluid resistant for approximately 85 washings.

HAMPER BAG

BeGard

Note: Fabric will remain fluid impervious for approximately 100 washes.

INDUSTRIAL/COMMERCIAL LAUNDRY BAG

Laundry bags do NOT have a flap. Most have draw cord closures. Most common looms today weave 60"- 64" fabric. Thus, the most common size is 30x40. Laundry bags were originally made of cotton, as was most everything. After polyester was developed, most bags were poly/cotton, which is stronger than 100% cotton.

Many bags are made of 100% nylon or polyester. How heavy depends on the use. Some bags are made of barrier, or even 100% impermeable vinyl. Where color-coding is desirable, synthetic bags are preferable because the dye doesn't run.

INDUSTRIAL/COMMERCIAL LAUNDRY BAG

Poly/cotton fabric is a great alternative to 100% synthetic fabric when abrasion is a concern because it is often heavier. There is also a cost advantage.

Nets

100% Polyester Net Bags

Greenbrook is America's leading supplier of laundry nets. Greenbrook nets are used by commercial laundries, the U.S. military, corrections, industrial and commercial users throughout the world. Mesh laundry "nets" are used where laundry is kept separate by washing in the bag. The main users are prisons, the military, retirement homes, gyms and athletics, mines and oil platforms. The mesh used is nearly all polyester. It is often used for color coding and comes in white and a variety of colors.

Plain Top

There are three main weights. Generally, if a facility has control of the nets, the heavier nets last much longer than the lighter weights, even though all are much stronger than the nets used at home.

CART COVERS

CLEAR CART COVERS EXPLAINED

There is great confusion about clear cart covers.

- What are they good for?
- What are their weaknesses?
- Are there alternatives?

What are clear cart covers good for?

Some people prefer clear cart covers at times because they really want to know what is on the cart. It is just that simple.

What are the weaknesses of clear cart covers?

There is a trade off. Really strong vinyl, like our B-Chek, has a “scrim” composed of heavy yarn in the middle of the vinyl. Clear vinyl is unreinforced. It is transparent but easy to tear. Sewing clear, unreinforced vinyl is tough. One mistake and you cut the fabric. So it must be sewn very slowly and carefully. Using it can be just as tough. One little jerk and the fabric can tear, especially at intersections. So you have to be VERY careful. If you are going to use a clear cover regularly, your chances of ruining it increase substantially. Once it starts to tear, there is no solution, because the vinyl is unreinforced.

Are there alternatives?

Not until now. HBD has developed two clear vinyls that are reinforced. They have the same antifungal, antimildew and fire resistant properties as our regular vinyl, and weigh the same. So they are much stronger than clear vinyl.

The reinforced vinyl is clear. So is the scrim. But the combination is not as transparent as clear vinyl. You will need to see if the reinforced vinyl works for your customers.

HBD makes NO GUARANTEES about its unreinforced clear vinyl covers except that they are sewn correctly. The moment they are used, our responsibility ends.

So make sure your customers inspect these covers before using them and make sure they know how these unreinforced clear covers must be treated if they want them to last.

Only HBD offers clear reinforced vinyl cart covers. Hopefully they will work for most users. But if users must have unreinforced clear covers, make sure they understand how to use them properly.
